

UL Standards Testing and Product Certification

Products sold in the United States must comply with the applicable nationally accepted UL standards. Comba's products are evaluated, tested and certified through a Nationally Recognized Test Lab (NRTL) to meet the strict UL requirement standards.

The Occupational Health and Safety Administration (OSHA) regulates products in the United States, that are used in the workplace, by stipulating that these products must be suitably third-party safety approved by a Nationally Recognized Testing Laboratory - <https://www.osha.gov/dts/otpca/nrtl/nrtllist.html>. A manufacturer has the option to select the NRTL of its choice for the testing and certification of their products. Additionally, they can expect that customers/retailers will accept products that have been listed by any NRTL.

If you have any questions, please contact us. We are more than happy to discuss Comba's product (UL) standards testing and certification process in more detail with you.